Fewer complaints – better dental health.

An occlusal splint can help correct teeth grinding and jaw problems.

Do you feel stressed out?

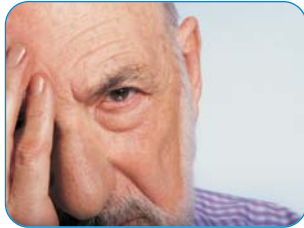

Stress can impact the mandibular joint.

The mandibular joint is constantly in motion. Just like the teeth, it must withstand tremendous forces. Especially those created by night time grinding of teeth.

Stress is strongly linked to night time tooth grinding and its associated effects. An occlusal splint helps to prevent these.

An occlusal splint can help correct teeth grinding and jaw problems.

Grinding and its possible effects:

- Tooth abrasion, change of position
- Cramping of the occlusal muscles
- Headaches that approach migraine
- Neck and shoulder tension

Has something shifted?

Pain can have many causes.

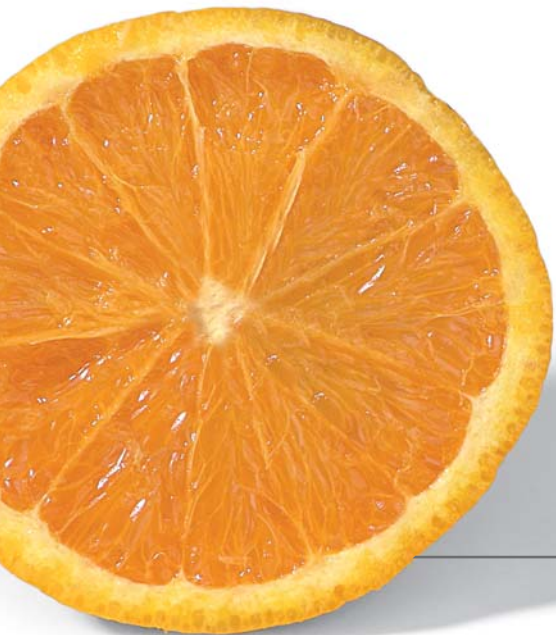

If the mandibular joint has shifted, it can cause disruption of the sensitive natural equilibrium. Besides mandibular joint pain, there may also be muscle pain, headaches and earaches. Your dentist knows the cause and can bring things back to normal with a splint.

An occlusal splint can help correct teeth grinding and jaw problems.

This is how an occlusal splint can help:

- Saving healthy tissue
- Protection from mandibular jaw injury
- Less joint cartilage wear
- Less muscle tension

Healthy again.

Simple solution – striking effect.

The Eclipse® junior splint is both discreet and comfortable. It is usually enough to wear it just at night to relieve tension and improve longstanding problems.

If you suffer from one of the problems we have described, ask your dentist as soon as possible whether an occlusal splint is right for you.
